

Guidance for Truck and other Commercial Transportation Traffic Originating In or Transiting Through New York to a Maryland Destination

The following guidelines are recommended for anyone participating in commercial transportation (trucking, bus driving, freight or passenger rail, shipping) originating from or transiting through New York City or the surrounding metropolitan areas in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut (the "Tri-State area") after March 20, 2020. This includes commercial truck drivers, bus and railway personnel, ship personnel, or others who spend any time in New York City or the Tri-State area as part of their work activities.

Description of Activity	Recommendation
Did you go straight through the	No need to self-quarantine. You should check yourself for any
New York-Tri-State area without	signs of fever, cough, or shortness of breath daily. If you develop stopping?	any of these symptoms, you should stop working, isolate yourself from others, and call your health care provider.
Did you stop only to get fuel and/or	No need to self-quarantine. You should check yourself for any food, with no contact with anyone	signs of fever, cough, or shortness of breath daily. If you develop
(other than less than 3 minutes	any of these symptoms, you should stop working, isolate yourself within 6 feet of any other person)?	from others, and call your health care provider.
Did you spend more than 3	Avoid working for 14 days, if you can, isolate yourself, and check minutes in close contact (less than	yourself for any signs of fever, cough, or shortness of breath daily.
6 feet) with someone while in the	If you must work, or must leave Maryland, avoid close contact
New York-Tri-State area?	with other people (stay 6 feet or more from others, for only 3 minutes or less) and check yourself for any signs of fever, cough, or shortness of breath daily. If you develop any of these, stop working and contact your health care provider.